

What a great start to the year we have had in Tolsey!

We are currently looking at the book 'Here we are' by Oliver Jeffers. So far we have looked at the front cover and made predictions about the book. We think the book will teach us about how to care for the planet but we will have to wait and see. This will be a two week project for us to start the year and is something everyone at Burford Primary are focusing on. We cannot wait to share our learning and to see what the rest of the school produce!

On Thursday in science we looked at respiratory hygiene. We used water spray bottles to see how far a sneeze can project and the importance of 'Catch it. Bin it. Kill it.' The lesson was great fun and taught us lots about how germs travel. There were plenty of giggles and squeals in the lesson.

I am really enjoying getting to know the children. I am there with the names of the children but still am unsure on parents and carers faces. I'm sure it won't take too long but I apologise now for not remembering who is who.
